Clothes Beats Doctor. Says Bulletin.

Helpful hints to mothers in the care of infants during the summer are offered by the Health Department in its weekly bulletin, made public today. "Careful attention to diet, cleanliness and plenty of fresh air will accomplish more in the saving of infants than the ministration of the doctors in their effort to cure summer diseases after they have once started," says the report. "Mother's milk is of course, the baby's natural food, and, if possible, no other should be used, but if, for any reason, it grees. This practice will alone accommilk in proper condition in hot weather. If the baby is bottle fed, the feeding bottles and nipples, after using, should be washed in hot water and thoroughly cleansed, and then scalded.

"Dress the baby in light airy cloth-ing, keep it in shady places where there is free circulation of air, and cover with mosquito netting to guard it from the germ-ladened fly. Give frequently a little pure cold water, not cooled with ice in the water, but cooled by the vessel below surrounded with by the vessel being surrounded with ice. These are simple preventive meas-urs within the means of everyone who can afford the luxury of a baby, and will cost much less than a doctor's fee
